SSIAN SHIPS WILL DASH FROM PT. ARTHUR

Admiral Prince Ouktomsky Gives Orders to the Remnants of the Fleet to Make the Attempt, and to Blow Themselves Up if Foiled.

CHEFOO, Aug. 22.-Intelligence has just reached here that Ad-Prince Ouktomsky has given orders to the commanders of the five ips, two cruisers and eleven torpedo boats and destroyers now in Port Arthur to be ready for another sally from that harbor.

The Admiral declares that the ships must fight the enemy, and if there is danger of capture they must be prepared to blow them up.

"To the death," is his summary of the situation. The greatest battle of the war is now in progress. The long promgeneral assault upon the works at Port Arthur is on and victory is in

It may take a week of solid fighting, with desperate charges over ound cleared by artillery fire, before the Russians hoist the white flag or he Japanese withdraw.

IAPS HAVE LOST HEAVILY.

The work thus far has been most deadly. The Japanese have adranced, but at a terrible cost. They have taken positions to the northwest in the main works and have occupied Pigeon Bay, only to be driven cast after having gained a victory. The fort at that place can be shelled by both sides, so that it is impossible for the troops of either side to hold The Japanese have been taken from the zone of fire at this particular important fort on the Itsshan Hills, between Louisa and Pieron Bays, has been taken and lost. For forty-eight hours the Japfire swept the ground and the fort until it was time for the infantry make the assault. Then the regiments were sent forward, and with a sh the works were carried.

It was the old story over again, a position dearly bought that could be held, while the Russian artillery kept up its fire and the duel of artillery was continued.

"Who are you staring at?" No reply, but the smile became surprised grin.

"You think you can insult me and get away with it, do you?" screame the angered woman, as she stood up and squared off. The man was too much astounded to reply except by a feebly uttered, "No harm meant, lady," when biff! the right fist, plump but not soft, shot out and caught him squarely in the left eye. It was followed by a straight jeb with the left, a trifle high, so it merely smashed the victim's black derby hat. The onslaught brought the man to his feet, and he tried to selze the woman, but she pushed him away and beat man, but she pushed him away and beat a tatoo on his face with her fists. The rest of the men watched the struggle, but none interfered.

The masher was taking his punishment without a murmur, when the conductor ran along the footboard and took hold of the woman's arm. Then, as she arranged her neck gear and set her big hat straight, she remarked:

"I know this man, but he goesn't know me. He has a wife and ought to be home with her. I'll teach him to stare at other womeu on cars. Put him out of this seat, or I'll give him some more."

The conductor tried to soothe the offended woman, but she would not listen
